

Procedural Guidelines for Structural Movers

HISTORIC DOCUMENT NOW AVAILABLE

Members of the International Association of Structural Movers (IASM) voted unanimously in February 2008 to adopt procedural guidelines that were formulated over a four-year period. An association industry guidelines task group, chaired by director Jason DeVooght, was composed of 16 IASM directors, a former director and president, plus an OSHA Outreach Trainer and association staff executive.

Members of IASM, and others in lifting specialties were invited to participate in compiling specific areas and procedures necessary to safely and efficiently lift, move and lower structures. The originally compiled list was shared with companies in the industry through other structural moving associations. After revisions, more than 300 members reviewed a final draft document during a two-hour session at the 27th annual conference of IASM in Minneapolis. Members voted, without a single dissent, to adopt the guidelines. Directors of the association reviewed one final draft prior to printing.

The 62-page document covers general safety guidelines and 51 specific topics. You'll want to be the first in your state, province or country to own this extremely valuable document.
